

GLO(B)AL CITIZEN PROJECT

Defining Globalization in New York

This series strives to magnify the global diasporas of race, ethnicity, religion, and culture to New York City through portraiture and narrative; thereby, encouraging interaction between those who are different and allowing them to connect on other levels (emotionally, socially, and culturally) to their audience.

In the Global Citizen series, subjects were chosen that have diverse backgrounds, as well as inspirational stories to tell.

The portraits and narratives of the Global Citizens capture their humanity and offer a relevant slice of their story to make them relatable to strangers; thereby, putting a face to diversity

One of the most empowering experiences for someone is to tell their story and be heard. Living as a Global Citizen can be very isolating, and, at times, Global Citizens can be easily misunderstood or even mistreated. Through this project, I hope to bring the humanistic aspect of globalization to life, which could enhance not only tolerance, but also understanding.
